NRA Call For Armed Guards in Schools Will Ensure School Shootings

Recently in reaction to the Sandy hook school shooting NRA executive Wayne LaPierre called for putting an armed guard in every school. He feels this would be a reasonable defense to the phenomenon of US school massacres. At first glance this might seem like a reasonable possible solution. However after some careful consideration we may find out this so called solution would certainly guarantee another school shooting and student death.

Here is my reasoning on this proposal.

If we were to introduce armed guards into schools the original mandate would be to defend against "lone nut" massacres aimed at school children. These guards would be hired and installed based on the goal of protecting students against people like Adam Lanza, Dylan and Klebold and the like. But there have only been roughly 100 such school massacres world wide since 1996.

While this is still a huge number of unnecessary deaths, it is still only a small fraction of daily school violence incidents. Every day in schools all across America school officials must deal with minor incidents of thefts, threats, assaults and drug sales and uses. It is only logical that these armed guards that are being assigned to defend students against assault wielding nuts the fact is these armed guards would be turned to for help on a regular basis to deal with these routine and HS fistfights.

How long before a child is held at gun point in a minor arrest for a fist fight or theft? How long before a child is shot in the name of officer safety? The student made a furtive motion, armed guard thought he saw a weapon and an unarmed child is shot dead?

While armed guards might seem like a quick solution it only guarantees the future unnecessary death of a child.

Advice From a Child Safety Advocate Kathy Picard

Have you ever thought about your husband or wife having a problem with abusing a child. A child that is in your family.

Well it does happen. With the statistics one in every 5 children will be a victim of sexual abuse before their 18th birthday. You may think to yourself I a having sex with them on a regular basis. Think again this doesn't matter.

A predator is not a creepy looking man or woman, 93% of the cases is someone the child knows and trusts. What can you do? Ask questions to the child, "Is someone harming you, touching you?" Ask these questions often.

I wish when I was a child someone asked me. I wish someone told me it IS okay to tell and not to keep a secret as I was told to do. Unfortunately I was abused from 7-17. I am fortunate though and speak of my abuse and am a survivor. You can never "Investigate" enough!

A Solution? Door to Door Searches To Confiscate Firearms

With the recent tragic school shooting in Connecticut many well meaning people are searching for solutions to an incredibly horrific problem facing our nation. For whatever reason our country has been plagued with an unexplainable problem. Most people cannot imagine why certain people in our society would want to arm themselves and shoot up public places like schools.

When these events happen they are usually followed by a few days of media hype with there same cast of characters of experts and TV therapists that hawk the same talking points calling for gun control, background checks ,increased mental help programs and anti bullying campaigns.

On the other side in the alternative media and blogs you'll have the conspiracy theories pointing to fluoride in the water, anti depressants and other medications or MKULTRA and other Govt sponsored mind control experiments that could be the motivation behind these shootings.

We can all debate the causes and solutions but today in this article I want to explore the ramifications of one possible "solution" to this problem and that is the knee jerk reaction to want to ban and or confiscate all firearms currently in the USA.

It would appear at first glance that this is a logical solution. If we simply take away all the guns lunatics can no longer use them to shoot up schools and thus spare us the horror and tragedy of seeing little school children murdered and their families traumatized.

But what would be involved in such a program of firearm surrender? I suppose first after an executive order there could be an emergency order requiring that all citizens surrender their guns. The most recent reports on the topic put the count at roughly 300 million firearms floating around the country. It would be a massive undertaking for these weapons to be voluntarily surrendered .

But even if the vast majority of these guns were surrendered voluntarily that would still leave a small percentage still unaccounted for. These weapons would be in the hands of the most unlawful, most militant, most extreme and most paranoid among us. The most extreme would be armed and the most compliant law abiders would then be unarmed.

This sounds like a worse situation than we started with. The only way to unarm those that do not comply is by door to door searches of peoples homes, businesses and storage facilities. Just as the military does in Afghanistan and other occupied countries.

This would be an incredible undertaking. Portions of city blocks and neighborhoods would have to systematically cordoned off with police and military preventing the entry and exist to those areas. Then every square inch would have to thoroughly searched with metal detectors. In order to ensure officer safety any civilian in that area would have to be temporarily detained and handcuffed and physically searched. Every man woman and child, just as people are searched by TSA agents in airports.

Because of the magnitude of this operation there would be no time for pleasantries. The soldiers would show up at your home in full force in body armor and secure the home with a room by room search, kicking in doors and overturning furniture in their search.

I believe we can all agree that this type of undertaking would be far more traumatizing to the entire nation of 314 million people than the 3 or 4 thousand victims, friends and families that have been affected by these school shootings and massacres.

I believe that if we as a country can come together in love and respect with a common goal of finding a solution to a common problem we can come to a solution. But the solution cannot be a knee jerk reaction of passing legislation. It cannot be one that is advocated by these talking heads and hacks that we see on TV. These people have their own self interests and agendas that do not include the good of the average citizen. About the Author:

Connecticut School Shooter Identified as 20-year-old Adam Lanza

12/14/2012 - Police sources close to the investigation have revealed that the suspect in the New Town Conn school shooting has been identified as 20-year-old Adam Lanza not Ryan Lanza, 24 Sandy Hook, CT.

News reports indicate as many as 20 kindergarten aged children have been fatally wounded due to gun shot wounds.
6 adults.

Other unconfirmed reports speculate that the shooter may be the son of a teacher or school employee.

The shooter behind a rampage Friday at a Connecticut elementary school was the son of a teacher and some of his victims may have been her students, the CBS affiliate in Newtown, Conn., reported.

Latest reports indicate a family member of Ryan Lanza has been found shot dead at home.

12:37 Fox News reports that the two weapons used in the school shooting were registered to the shooters mother.

Mel Robbins: "A group of 20 parents went to the designated area to pick up their kids and were told they were dead. Some parents collapsed with grief."

12:51 Unconfirmed report that brother of Ryan Lanza is in police custody.

Photo of Ryan Lanza being circulated on news is NOT THE SAME RYAN LANZA as Connecticut Shooter

Can A Husband Or Wife Spy On Their Spouse's Emails?

Can A Husband Or Wife Spy On Their Spouse's Emails?

By Ed Opperman

If you suspect your husband of infidelity you may be tempted to hack into his email account in order to read his private emails. This could be a huge mistake. Even if you suspect your man is cheating you do not have a right to invade another persons privacy with email hacking. In fact recently a husband who logged onto his wife's email account was arrested and is now facing up to 5 years in prison. This man is being charged with felony computer misuse, and faces up to five years in prison after logging into the email account of now ex-wife on a shared laptop using her password.

So while it may be tempting to try to do it yourself when investigating infidelity it's really something that's best left up to the professionals. A professional investigator will know what is and isn't legal when investigating infidelity. Had this man consulted with a professional he could have saved himself a great deal of time, money and aggravation.

There are many legal ways through digital forensics to obtain evidence of infidelity. There are also methods to trace emails to online dating sites and social networks that will return the evidence of infidelity you are seeking. If a professional is investigating and obtaining this evidence they will know how to carefully document their efforts and maintain a chain of custody so that the evidence can be used in court.

As an investigator many times a client will contact me and ask me to get their spouses email passwords or commit some other kind of crime. As a professional it's up to me to explain what can and cannot be done legally. Computer forensics, cell phone forensics, Internet infidelity searches are just a few ways to legally recover evidence of cheating spouse activity. But these are only a few of the things a professional investigator can do for you to expose a cheating spouse. Legally.

It's so important to remember that every step taken in any investigation must be done in complete compliance with all the applicable laws. Before consulting with a private detective be sure to ask if they have experience in this field of investigation. Be wary of online web sites offering do it yourself spy gear and wire tapping equipment. While it may be lawful for them to sell the devices it still may be illegal for you to misuse the equipment to spy on your husband or wife.
